Don't Make Me Think. As a rule, people don't like to puzzle over how to do things. If people who build a site don't care enough to make things obvious it can erode confidence in the site and its publishers. Don't waste my time. Much of our web use is motivated by the desire to save time. As a result, web users tend to act like sharks.

Krug invariably answers, "Don't make me think!" He explains that websites need to be self-evident, obvious, and self-explanatory. Through effective design, they need to tell users what the site has to offer, where to start, and how to find what they're looking for. Krug points out several common design errors that make users "think".

Don't Make Me Think, Revisited Quotes Showing 1-30 of 50 - If there's one thing you learn by working on a lot of different Web sites, it's that almost any design idea--no matter how appallingly bad--can be made usable in the right circumstances, with enough effort.

Don't Make Me Think, Revisited Quotes by Steve Krug

I don't like the new look, because every time I use it I have to think whereas before it was intuitive. That's the whole point of "don't make me think". You should never have to think about how to use a web site. If you need to use your brain to do something simple, the designer has FAILED. "Don't make me think" is a quick and easy read.
