Ethnolinguistics (sometimes called cultural linguistics) is a field of linguistics that studies the relationship between language and culture and how different ethnic groups perceive the world. It is the combination between ethnology and linguistics. The former refers to the way of life of an entire community: all the characteristics that distinguish one community from the other.

Ethnolinguistics - Wikipedia

A common assumption is that people think in language, and that language and thought influence each other. [citation needed] Linguistics studies how language is used and acquired. The strong version of the Sapir-Whorf hypothesis in linguistics states that language determines thought, and that linguistic categories alone limit and determine cognitive categories.
