High-res. Ships don't sink because of the water around them; ships sink because of the water that gets in them. Don't let what's happening around you get inside you and weigh you down.

Ships don't sink because of the water around them

Ships sink all the time for various reasons entirely outside of the ship's control. This is a stupid metaphor. Don't let structural damage or stormy seas sink you, even though there's more than likely nothing you can do about it at a certain point!
